

What are you looking for?

Financial independence? The ability to set your own schedule? An opportunity to run your own business with virtually no overhead and no risk? Are you tired of doing all the work and not reaping all the rewards? Do you wish you had a business partner who supported your dreams?

We've been there...

Our Story

After being in the kitchen and bath industry for 10 years, Click Cabinets president, Krysta Starz, wondered why she worked so hard for others while taking home small commission checks. She's a motivated, hard-working, designer who really knows her stuff. Why do all the work and not reap all the reward? Oh yeah, because opening your own showroom takes about a hundred thousand dollars that she certainly didn't have laying around.

Always thinking out of the box, Krysta looked at this dilemma as an opportunity. An opportunity to develop a new way to establish a successful kitchen and bath business. And successful it has become!

Click Cabinets, now has relationships with several partner companies across the country. We've been able to develop strong industry ties and break through the typical business road blocks in order to pursue our vision.

This includes offering premium products to designers such as yourself, without requiring you to have a showroom. You are not even required to have any samples, but they, of course, available to you.

Our Vision

What can't you buy online these days? You can shop for clothes, buy a car, and even do your grocery shopping! Why not buy a kitchen online? Or partner up with another business that might be across the country from you? The beauty of the internet is that all of these things are possible.

A Little More About Us

Yes, we sell custom kitchen and bath cabinetry online to homeowners across the country. We also work directly with builders and contractors throughout the United States. We have an experienced design staff who handles all of these requests, which is headed up by Click's founder and president.

We like to think we're on to something and our business load proves us right. As people become more and more comfortable making large purchases online and the kitchen industry technology advances, this trend will only increase. We are thrilled to be at the forefront of this opportunity.

What Does This Mean for You?

We've worked hard to establish our small business doing big things and we want to help you do the same. Many kitchen designers run the businesses they work for – you know it, we know it, and trust us, your boss knows it too. To be a good kitchen designer is difficult job. It takes vision, hard work, dedication, motivation, multitasking and sometimes you feel like a marriage counselor. But for many, it becomes a passion.

If you find yourself in such a position, we have the solution.

Get Started

Getting started is simple...

Due to the nature of our business and potential partnership being a little more unique than a classic business relationship, we approach things slightly differently.

- 1) Even though this is not typical employment, we'd like to see and review your resume. We'd like to learn a bit more about your history and experience to ensure we'll be a proper fit.
- 2) Speak with a Click representative. This will help clear up any questions you may have as well as allow us to get to know you a bit better.
- 3) Fill out a Design Partner Application; available from a Click representative. It's a simple one page document; nothing invasive or complex.

That's it! Once approved, you can get started right away!

Have Questions? We'll Help!

Just as with any new experience, we're sure you'll have questions as you get started working with us. If you are not familiar with our brands, the learning curve will be greater, and that's okay. A basic understanding of kitchen and bath design is really all you need to get started.

No matter what your question, we've likely heard it and already have an answer for you. Regardless, the least we'll do is send you in the right direction to get the information you need. Whether that means point you to the right page of a spec book, send you a webinar link, let you know about classes happening in your area, or even host a web meeting to show you how to get through. Think of us as your secret weapon – we will always have your back.

Click's goal with our Design Partner program is to help. To help you succeed, help you see financial freedom, help you believe in yourself and your design abilities. If there is anything more we can do to help, all you need to do is ask.
